CONGRESSMAN ASWELL PRAISES ADA SPIRIT

Congressman J. B. Aswell of Louisiana, who created such a favorable impression in his lecture at the chautauqua Tuesday afternoon, was much pleased with Ada and her citizens. To the News reporter he said:

"You not only have a fine prosperous town here, but I admire the spirit of your citizens. I find a better chautauqua and school spirit here than anywhere else I have been this summer. Keep it up."

The congressman is primarily a school man, having taught several years and then filling the office of state superintendent of Louisiana for a long period prior to his election to congress. When he went to Washington he was thoroughly disgusted when in the various departments he found an indiscriminate mixture of whites and negroes, white women clerks often having their desks beside those of negro men. He has introduced a bill segregating the races in the departments and will push its passage most vigorously.

Among his other activities in educational lines Congressman Aswell is vice-president of the Peabody board of trust, which controls the great Peabody college for teachers at Nashville, of which school he is an alumnus.

To Meet In Mormon Tabernacle.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 25.—The local committee in charge of arrangements for the annual convention of the National Educational Association here next month is in daily receipt of advices indicating that the attendance will establish a new high figure in the record of the association meetings. The convention will be held the week of July 7. The general sessions will take place in the Mormon Tabernacle, famous for having the most wonderful acoustic properties in the world. Numerous other halls and auditoriums will be used for the meetings of the different departments and sections of the convention. The speakers before the general sessions will include many of the most eminent educators of the country. It is expected that the convention will perfect plans for the proposed nationwide campaign to raise $1,000,000 as a permanent interest bearing fund to be used to advance the interests of public education through the association. The money is needed, it is declared, to meet the new demands for educational progress.

TAX VALUES SHOW INCREASE

PONTOTOC COUNTY VALUES FOR 1913 SHOW INCREASE OF HALF MILLION.

The total tax values of Pontotoc county for the current year, as fixed by Tax Assessor Heard and the county commissioners are $7,980,874, an increase of $532,677 over the values for 1912.

This year 154,262 acres of land was returned, against 143,487 for 1912. Value of land and improvements, $2,447,276 against $1,776,103 for 1912. Average value per acre, $15.86. Town lots 13,677 valued at $2,639,560. For 1912 the value was $2,519,637. Personal property for 1913, $2,894,033; for 1912, $3,152,377.

As will be seen from the above figures real estate and improvements show an increase of $791,636 over 1912, and personal property shows a decrease of $258,359, leaving the net increase $532,677.

The above figures do not include public service corporations whose valuations are fixed by the state board. These will probably add something over $2,000,000 to the total for the county.

ABOLISHED AGAIN

Oklahoma City, June 25.—Final passage of the general road law, which abolishes the state highway department, with the emergency clause, introduction of a bill appropriating $10,000 to fight the grasshopper and other insects and the submission of reports from the investigating committee on the attorney general's office and the corporation commission, marked Tuesday's session of the house of representatives. The senate met at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The general road bill was left in conference at the time the recess was taken in May, the committees failing to agree on several of the provisions of minor importance. The conference committee report was accepted, and the bill passed by the house immediately thereafter. The bill abolishes the office of commissioner of highways, and creates the office of state engineer whose duties are to extend over the roadwork, irrigation and other engineering work. The engineer shall upon request furnish expert information and advice to the various counties in the matter of construction of good roads, bridges and irrigation projects.

There is only a few days left before we move to our new place east of Sam Shaw's Department Store, opposite Harris Hotel. During that time you can buy anything in the Furniture line nearly at Wholesale Prices.

REPORT RAPS ATTORNEY GENERAL

Oklahoma City, June 25.—The attorney general's policy in delaying prosecutions of the Oklahoma passenger rate case, his expenditure of public funds without authority of law and his interpretation as to the powers that he may exercise are severely criticised in the report of the house investigating committee which was submitted to the legislature Tuesday. The signing of a stipulation in 1911 between the attorney general and the railroads agreeing to let the Oklahoma rate case remain in statu quo until a decision in the Minnesota case, the committee states, has caused the people of Oklahoma to pay $2,750,000 in excess fares since that time. The attorney general's delay in pushing the case since the temporary injunction was granted against enforcement of the three cent fare has caused the people to pay altogether $4,900,000 in excess of the two cent fare according to the committee. The report charges that the attorney

The editor of the Pauls Valley Free Lance bitterly resents a statement made by contemporary to the effect that the editor is partial to peruna. He says hostilities is his favorite brand. A heavy weight debate has just been pulled off in Texas between advocates of buttermilk and pot licker, and in view of the satisfactory nature of the settlement, we would suggest that these two champions of peruna and hostetter be given a similar opportunity to be heard. If not sooner, this debate should by all means form a part of the program of the next press meeting. We admire a man who sticks up for his convictions.

FOUND IN RUINS OF LYSTRA

Beautifully Sculptured Stone and Remains of Early Christian Church Reward Travelers' Visit.

On the great sloping hillside where the chief buildings of Lystra stood, and the level plain at its foot, the only semblance of buildings we saw, says a writer in the Christian Herald, were some rough stone sheepfolds where the shepherds shelter their timid flocks by night or in stormy weather. Built into one of these rude sheepfolds we found a beautifully sculptured stone with inscriptions that would rejoice the heart of an archeologist.

In another part of the plain we saw the scanty ruins of a small Christian church. Near it a fountain gushes forth. This fountain is called Ayasma, and its very name shows that it was considered sacred by the Christians.

The most interesting site in all Lystra is that of the temple where Paul and Barnabas were hailed as gods. At least there is every probability that its location has been discovered, for on the level plain, just before the land begins to rise to the hill on which the chief buildings were situated, on its southeast side stands a pedestal on which is an inscription showing that it was dedicated to the Emperor Augustus, whose worship was connected with the chief temple. "Here undoubtedly was the temple of 'Zeus-before-the-City,' and wonderful discoveries and confirmation of Scripture doubtless await the excavator's spade.

LIBERIA, THE BLACK REPUBLIC

Paris, June 24:—Liberia, the republic founded on the western coast of Africa by American negroes as a haven for their black brothers, is a monumental fizzle according to Claude Wallace, an Englishman, who to day is in Paris after a stay of several months in the "colored man's country". Wallace says that if the negro, by creating Liberia, wished to prove his capacity of self-government, he botched the job, for utter incapacity stares one in the face every turn. If it were not a great comedy, he declared, it would be a great tragedy, for all that is horrible treads close upon the heels of things which make one laugh until one's sides ache. "Liberia," Wallace said, "ostensibly has a government like any other republic. She has an army and she has a navy. The navy is named 'The Lark,' and a lark she is, being a small steam yacht formerly owned by Baron de Rothschild, of Paris. Her chief business is to keep slave-traders from invading Liberian territory, but owing to a lack of coal with which to get up steam, she has to stay in harbor most of the time.

"Once in a while, though, The Lark accumulates enough fuel to make a sortie. Sighting an enemy the vessel will chase it about 10 miles out, then run up a signal of distress and beg for coal enough to get back to land.

"The fleet at least has a magnificent admiral. He seldom ventures aboard his fuelless dreadnaught, but when he does, he is bedecked in a uniform almost every inch of which is covered with glittering, gold braid. His cruises are usually not unconnected with a search for new revenues since he carries with him large supplies of pretty stamps which he sells as souvenirs to tourists aboard the infrequent steamers.

"The republic's territory really extends far inland, but the people of this hinterland do not know it. They have the reputation of eating their neighbors and the more civilized Liberians are mortally afraid of them. The latter are still confined to a narrow strip of coast beyond which they dare not budge lest the inhabitants of the interior make a meal of their carcasses. Strangely enough, though of the same race, the new comers have not had the slightest civilizing effect upon the natives. Torture still exists among these people in its most horrible forms. Here is one of the favorites:

"There is a species of ferocious ant in Liberia which at certain seasons invades the villages and routs the inhabitants from their huts. There is no way to fight the ant. When the ants arrive the natives surrender. And when the ants have cleaned out the hut eating every vestige of food of whatever description, they march on the next habitation.

"The victim to be tortured is stripped and tied to a post. He is gorged with honey and his mouth propped open with a stick. A trail of honey is drawn from his mouth, over his chin, down his neck, body and legs to the ground and out to the nearest jungle.

"Soon the terrible, carnivorous ants appear on the honey trail and slowly, in a thick, black line, begin their march toward the poor devil tied to the stake. When they reach him, they keep right on. They climb his body and disappear, scores of them, through his lips and down his throat. "For half an hour, perhaps, the victim writhes as a person would who has taken a violent poison. Then he stops his writhing and his head sags upon his ant covered chest. He is dead.

"The Liberians seem to realize the mess they have made of things, for my impression was that they desired most earnestly to be annexed, or taken under the protecting wing of some European power, preferably England. They want to be saved from themselves—and incidentally from their brethren of the inland.

"Liberia has not been able, so far, to lure any European country to her side, but she hasn't yet given up all hope. The people think if they can stir up trouble, involving subjects of one of the great powers, intervention would follow and perhaps annexation. So, on my trip into the hinterland, I freely confess now, I was always uneasy lest I, being an Englishman, should be considered a good specimen to begin things with. I always slept with one eye open. Visions of ants, marching in a long black line toward myself, while I might be tied to a stake—ugh!

"No; really, Liberia is not—decidedly not—what might be called a success as a nation and a world power."

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards, of this place, during the past 12 years, has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years, I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles.

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs. I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a man could well be.

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Thedford's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines.

I have been working daily on the farm ever since, and I am as hard as iron." This purely vegetable remedy has been in successful use for more than 70 years. Try it. But be sure that it's "Thedford's."

Family Bulletin Board.

Get a prettily mounted scratch pad and hang in the hall, close to where you lay off your wraps. Hang a pencil to the tablet. When a mother leaves the house before the children are home from school she should write on it where she has gone and when she expects to return, and also remind them of any duties she wishes them to perform in her absence. In their turn, if they go out, they should write a message for her, so that she will know where they are and when they will return. If any one calls on any member of the family during his or her absence, it should be promptly recorded, together with any message that may have been left. Telephone messages should also be written down as soon as received. Each member of the family should look at the bulletin board immediately upon entering the house, and thus no one will ever be bothered by messages being forgotten.

Follower of Quantrell Tells Interesting Story

Tuesday evening J. W. Davis and wife entertained an old Confederate veteran who related a most interesting story of his campaigns with Quantrell during the civil war and his experiences since then. The old gentleman is Rev. B. F. Garrett and he is ninety-five years of age, although he holds his age so well that he would pass of a man much younger in years.

He states that all of the accounts of Quantrell's disappearance and death after the war closed are erroneous. He says that the chieftain died only about five years ago in Angelina county, Texas, where he had lived quietly after the fall of the Confederacy. He visited Quantrell about ten years ago. Mr. Garrett says he was the only preacher with the Quantrell band and he took part in most of the daring exploits of that leader, including the raid on Lawrence, Kansas.

Mr. Garrett lived at Galveston for a number of years prior to the flood and when it came he happened to be away from home holding a revival meeting. In the storm twenty-six members of his family were lost, only a grand daughter escaping. When he returned to the scene of desolation and saw the bodies of hundreds of victims being cremated in the great funeral pyres of debris, his reason fled and for two years he was an inmate of the state asylum. Finally he recovered his sanity as suddenly as it had left him and completely restored he left the asylum. Since then he has been trying to locate his grand daughter and only recently found her by means of an advertisement. He was on his way from Arkansas to Chickasha to join her when passing through Ada.

ALLEN BUYS CARNEY LIVERY BARN

W. J. Allen has bought out G. P. Carney's livery business and will combine it with his transfer line. Mr. Allen is an old timer in the business and will make a success of the combined lines. Another one of those popular two-reel pictures at the DeSota this evening: "The Master Cracksman." It is a Reliance film, a fact that carries with it a guaranty of being first class in every respect. It is a wonderful dramatization of the story by S. A. Reynolds. First count of votes in the contest takes place Friday night.

Get 100 Cents Value for Every Dollar You Spend

A dollar is worth 100 cents value in everything you buy, but do you always get "value received"?

You can give or take from the value of dollar by the way in which you spend it. Your pleasures in life, your standing and influence in the community depend largely upon the value you place on every dollar you own and the value you get on every dollar you spend.

Dollars spent unwisely lose their full purchasing power and value to you; careful spending and systematic saving will enable you to secure "value received" and future independence.

You will secure full value on every dollar you spend by reading the advertisements in the NEWS closely and constantly every day. THE NEWS' advertisements will tell you the best purchasing opportunities and direct you to the most reliable stores in Ada.

GRIFFITH-HODGE

At 9 o'clock Tuesday evening Mr.
Claude Griffith and Miss Bernice Hodge were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hodge, on East 10th street, Rev. C. L. Brooks officiating. The wedding was a very quiet home affair, only the families of the contracting parties and a few intimate friends being present.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion and a beautiful floral arch had been prepared under which the couple stood during the ceremony. The wedding march was played by Miss Maurine Truitt.

After the ceremony refreshments were served, and after receiving the congratulations and best wishes of the party, the newly wedded pair departed for their home on East 9th street, which was recently completed.

The bride is one of the fairest of all the beautiful daughters of Ada. She has grown to womanhood in this city, admired and loved by a large circle of friends, who recognized her true worth and appreciated her wonderful charm of manner. She was a member of the last senior class of the Ada normal, and her record as a student was one of the best.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs.
R. E. Griffith. He is a young man of sterling worth and high character and holds a responsible position in the First National bank. Of all winners of June brides he must be reckoned as one of the most fortunate.

This evening the Majestic will present two good reels of pictures that are guaranteed to please any kind of audience. This first will be "The Sheriff's Son," an exciting western story. As a gloom dispeller and cure for the blues, "Seven Years' Bad Luck," Friday evening there will be a big special entitled, "A Change of Administration," being a White House story of Washington.

TRY IT! SAYS SAGE TEA DARKENS AND BEAUTIFIES FADED, GRAY HAIR.

Mixed With Sulphur Makes Hair Soft and Luxuriant and Removes Dandruff.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is coming in vogue again, says a well-known downtown druggist. It was our grandmother's treatment and hundreds of women and men too, are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mossy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is the most popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply dampen a soft brush or sponge with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight, and by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive: besides prevents dandruff; itching scalp and falling hair. Here you gray-haired folks, get busy; look years younger. Gwin &

Baptist Meeting Grows in Interest

The meeting at the Second Baptist church grows in interest as time passes. The preaching services grow better from sermon to sermon. Those who were present last evening know that Elder Guy certainly can preach.
By many it was pronounced the best sermon of the meeting. His subject was, "Be sure your sins will find you Out." Those who heard his portrayal and denunciation of sin and how it leaves its wounds and scars learned a lesson that will benefit them through all coming life.

At 10 a. m. this morning he preached another powerful sermon on the subject, "The Preciousness of Christ."
There will be a special service this evening, and those who fail to attend will miss something they should hear.
Special services again Thursday morning. Subject of sermon, "Heaven"

by disordered kidneys. My joints were so stiff that I could hardly move.
I had a dull, heavy ache over my kidneys which clung to me day and night and rheumatic pains darted through my body. The kidney secretions were disordered and passed with a burning sensation. I used various kidney medicines, but Doan's Kidney Pills were the first remedy that gave me relief.
I improved rapidly and on continu-

CHAUTAUQUA FOR

1914 ASSURED

The requisite number of signers to the chautauqua guaranty was secured Tuesday afternoon and another year will see a larger and stronger chautauqua at Ada. The forty-two signers guarantee over $800 and interest in the present one is sufficient evidence that it will prove a success. It is planned to put the season tickets at half price to the students attending the summer term of the normal at that time. That in itself will mean much to both chautauqua and teachers and add interest to the summer term, to say nothing of the citizens of Ada in general.

Chautauqua Will Close This Evening

The chautauqua will close this evening with a grand band concert by the Imperial Guards. The five days of entertainment have been very profitable ones and that the citizens are pleased is evidenced by the readiness with which they signed up for another in 1914. A great deal of credit is due to the local managers who have proved very affable and courteous to the patrons of the chautauqua, and if possible the management should send them back next year to conduct the next one.

Men Welcome Mother's Friend

A Duty that Every Man Owe to Those who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful, penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus with renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

'LEST WE FORGET" "STONEWALL" JACKSON

Fifty-two years ago at Manassas he was as always, brilliant and fearless in defense of the hearth stones and liberties of our Southland and under this biting test of real fire no man then or thereafter found ought but the clear sheen of pure metal. It was on this field that a knightly comrade, about to die, called him "Stonewall."

This new name represented to Jackson's comrades, those sturdy gentlemen who made up the rank and file of the Confederate Army, the synonym of strength and steadiness, and was peculiarly suitable to his character, and until his death on the field of battle, his life stands as a clear proof that these gallant southern soldiers, themselves and their motives unsullied, knew by instinct the real man from the counterfeit.

Neither centaph nor words of homage can ever portray the fiery genius and impetuous valor or the intuitive and lightning-like stroke of his attack, and even the name "Stonewall" but faintly conveys an idea of Jackson's impenetrable and immovable defense against odds unheard of in other wars.

His marvelous campaigns are now used by students of strategy everywhere, but his fame as a soldier was exceeded by the love and almost idolatrous confidence in the man, which was displayed by his war-worn comrades, and it can be said truly of himself and his cause, "that none died with more honor or more glory, though many died and there was much of both honor and glory."

In all these years, here in the former capital of the Confederacy, no equestrian statue to Stonewall Jackson has been raised but we will without fail build one now. There should and will be no repeated appeals for money, but we feel that every southern man, woman or child is entitled to the privilege of making a contribution and having his or her name and address deposited in the corner stone as that of one of its builders.

If you feel that this tribute is due from the southern people to the memory of Stonewall Jackson, your checks drafts or other communications will be appreciated and acknowledged if addressed to E. D. Hotchkiss, Treasurer, First National Bank Building, Richmond, Va. The Association will appreciate it most highly if the weekly and monthly press will display this article. REV. J. POWER SMITH, President Stonewall Jackson Monument Association, Richmond, Va.

CONGRESSMAN ASWELL CAPTURES AUDIENCE

Congressman J. B. Aswell completely captivated a large audience Tuesday afternoon with his lecture on "Efficiency of Citizenship." Although he was weak from the effects of a severe hemorrhage of the night before, he was able to thrill his audience with his masterly presentation of his subject and hold every one to the very last. He made no attempt at high flown oratory but every sentence was made to count to the utmost. He also enlivened his lecture with many humorous stories which he used by way of clinching his argument.

Mr. Aswell has spent most of his life in the fields of education and has come to the conclusion that the country needs more practical knowledge and less theory. It is for more of the practical that he now appeals. To attain the ideal condition there must be intelligence, service, and mastery of self. These conditions lead the individual, as well as the nation, to the highest point attainable—Liberty.

The teachers of the country must be looked to to bring about the great result. By way of illustration he referred to the case of Prussia, which was completely conquered by Napoleon. In two or three more generations the tide turned and the flag of Prussia floated over the ramparts of Paris. Bismarck declared that this was not due so much to the German armies as to the influence of the teachers, who had brought the nation to a high point of intelligence.

The Daughter of David Kerr

By
Harry King Tootle

Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1913, by A. C. McElroy & Co.)

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter learning of his real character.

CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.

CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.

CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.

CHAPTER V—Gloria twits Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.

CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the furnishing of the Kerr home.

CHAPTER VII—One society bud who refused to meet Gloria is forced to do so when her father is made to feel Kerr's power.

CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

CHAPTER IX—Kerr, through his henchmen, exerts every influence to hamper Wright in the publication of his paper.

CHAPTER X—Gloria realizes she is not being received by the best society and is unhappy. She takes up settlement work.

CHAPTER XI—Kerr and his lieutenants decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office.

CHAPTER XII—Wright in his desire to keep from Gloria knowledge of her father's position, avoids her during the night. Gloria is piqued.

CHAPTER XIII—Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference.

CHAPTER XIV—Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to a finish.

CHAPTER XV—The Belmont News appears with a bitter attack on Kerr. Gloria calls Wright a coward and refuses to listen to any explanation from him.

CHAPTER XVI—Broken-hearted, Gloria decides to plunge more deeply into settlement work.

CHAPTER XVII—She calls on a sick girl of the underworld named Ella.

CHAPTER XVIII—She learns for the first time that her father is the head of a notorious gang of political grafters.

"And I was so proud, oh, so proud!" moaned the daughter of David Kerr. "Joe! Joe! You did love me!—I sent him away, and I never understood. Now I can see it all. The social slight—the cold disdain I could not understand—the whispers that died away before they reached my ears—all, all, all because I was David Kerr's daughter, David Kerr, the boss of Belmont."

Her father's name exercised a fascination over her. Again and again she repeated it, her lips curling with scorn.

"David Kerr, the boss of Belmont!" she cried with a contempt that wrung her heart. "David Kerr, the king of underhand manipulators! David Kerr, the man these wretched women look to for protection—and pay him for it!"

This new thought was a poisoned arrow that sank into her heart. As she dwelt upon it her eyes fell upon her handsome tailored coat and her beautiful hat she had laid aside.

"And with the money these unhappy creatures pay, he—he—God in Heaven! Where did the money come from for these clothes I wear? What shall I do? All these years, and I never knew!"

Where the money came from to pay for her handsome clothes wracked her as poignantly as would a great physical pain. Her thoughts were incoherent, skipping from one horrid phase of the situation to another. Though they were disconnected, they were not vague. Each was a ruthless view of her deplorable position.

"Why did he let me come home? How can I bear to have anyone look at me on the street? I can hear them now saying, 'That's she, the boss' daughter. See her fine clothes. We know where the money came from to buy them.' And I, like a leper, must ever cry, 'Unclean, unclean,' and see those whom I would love flee ever on before me."

This made her think again of Joe Wright. Surely he had loved her beyond all reason to have wished to marry her, the daughter of such a man.

"Joe, poor old Joe, how he has suffered because of me." She had chosen in her blindness not to listen to him, and now he was gone forever. She had obeyed the dictation of pride and stifled the prompting of love, and now her punishment seemed greater than she could bear. "He did love me. He knew, and still loved me. And I drove him away. Well, it was better so; but he did not love me—once. It's better so—for him."

It was now a far more grievous prospect than that of the long years which had confronted her when she had realized the previous day how solitary was to be her way. Then she had had position, power, and pride; now these had been stripped from her, and nothing had been given her in their stead. In a passionate flood of tears she sank to the floor and cried as if her heart would break.

Through it all Little Ella slept, not knowing that in her room was being enacted a tragedy of the heart more profound than any she with all her shallowness could live in a century of heartaches.

CHAPTER XIX.

Grief made Gloria insensible to the flight of time, and how long she had been prostrate on the floor before sounds on the stairs aroused her she did not know. Thinking that it must be Mrs. Hayes returning with a physician, she rose hastily and tried to remove all traces of her tears. She wished above all to avoid explanations, and if none was asked she did not wish to have her grief misconstrued. But it was not Mrs. Hayes, for Gloria could hear the heavy tread ascending to the floor above.

Little Ella was restless and rolled and tossed in her sleep. The daughter of David Kerr looked with pity upon her. Her discipline was too new, her spirit was still too untamed for her to understand fully the kinship of the human race. Although she recognized that she was herself without the caste she thought was hers, she had not come to know that on the last great day there would be only the judgment of the just and the unjust, not of the high and the low, of the rich and the poor, of the wise and the ignorant, of the master and the servant.

"Poor girl," murmured Gloria, "you shall see that I do understand."

There was also much which she could learn from this bit of flotsam cast up by an unkind sea upon a cheerless shore. Seeing that Little Ella was not sleeping soundly, her desire to know more got the better of her duty as a nurse. She shook her gently, and soon was rewarded by seeing her eyes open.

"What you want?" asked the patient.

"Time to take your medicine," Gloria answered unblushingly. This was only a subterfuge, and it hurt her to receive the profuse thanks which it evoked.

"How are we going to begin to make things right down here?" Gloria asked when Little Ella had sunk back upon her pillow.

"Begin?" The girl did not understand.

"Yes, you and I. Things can't go on as they are."

"Why, begin with the boss, of course."

Gloria could not have been stabbed by a more cruel reply.

"Ah, yes," she sighed, "but how?"

"That's up to you and yer pa."

Little Ella recognized that the boss was out of her sphere of influence.

"Yes, yes, I know. Tell me—does—David Kerr," she spoke the name with an effort, "ever—come down here?"

"Him? Naw. We never see nothing o' him."

His daughter gave a sigh of relief. "We don't know nothing 'bout him much. We don't see him, but we feel him. He lives alone, out in the country."

"Then can he really know?"

"He's a man, ain't he?" demanded the woman of the streets fiercely. "He knows, but what does he care? I wish he had a daughter."

"What's that?" Gloria asked. The manner in which Little Ella had spoken made her catch her breath with a feeling that was akin to dread.

"I wish he had a daughter, an' that she'd have to suffer what we down here suffer."

Gloria held up her hand, bidding her cease from even thinking such a thing.

"No, no, no, not that."

"Why not?" the other went on doggedly. "Could she be any better'n I was once? I tell you, I'd like to have a daughter of his here, and watch her struggle to keep the breath in her body."

"Have you no mercy?" begged Gloria.

"What mercy hev I had shown me by Noonan—'cept for his own profit? What mercy from David Kerr? Wouldn't he laugh to see a daughter o' his in this hell-hole?"

Gloria convulsively covered her eyes with her hands as if to shut out even the thought of such a sight. Little Ella went on harshly, "What a joke it would be! But I'd laugh. I'd watch her, the little darling, to see that she paid the price as I've done."

Gloria could stand it no longer.

"Stop, you senseless girl. You make a mockery of pity and compassion. It's absurd to vent your rage upon something that doesn't exist. David Kerr has no daughter."

Little Ella accepted this answer without question, unmindful that a short while before her visitor had denied all knowledge of the man.

"I wish he had," she said regretfully.

A door slammed suddenly overhead.

"Aren't you afraid here alone?" Gloria asked.

"Naw. I ain't scared in the daytime, an' at night I'm out most o' the time."

The sound of a scuffle on the floor above brought both women to attention. There came a sudden, smothered cry for help which made Gloria's blood run cold. Then there was a heavy thud as if some one had been felled by a blow.

"What's it all about?" she cried, springing to her feet in terror.

"Nothin'. Stay where you are."

That door."

The sounds of the affray grew louder. Again came the cry for help.

"What's going on? I must know. Some one's in trouble. Didn't you hear some one call?"

"They're maybe just foolin'." Ella was listening intently. "Don't you butt in."

"But I can't stand here doing nothing. I must see what's the matter."

One could never accuse Gloria of lack of courage. She had never seen the horse she was afraid of, and a sailboat in a heavy sea made her laugh the more the louder the wind whistled through the rigging. Her feeling of personal power, inherited from her father, had been strongly developed. She had by this time overcome her first fear, and now she intended to know what the trouble was all about. Some one was in distress and to do what she could was her one thought as she started toward the door.

"Better not open that door," Little Ella pleaded.

Even as she spoke, they heard a door slam at the head of the stairs above. Some one lurched heavily to the stairway, and then to their horror—they knew it by the sound just as well as if the scene had been enacted before their eyes—the man tripped and plunged down the narrow stairs.

"I must know what's going on," Gloria cried.

She rushed across the room and wrenched open the door. At the foot of the stairway just before her was the body of a man, limp and motionless.

"It's a man. He's hurt," she called back to the sick woman as she knelt to examine him.

He had fallen so that she could not get a good look at him in the dark hallway, and she rolled him toward the door to get him on his back and see his face. As she gazed upon his countenance the fingers of death itself seemed to seize her by the throat. Her heart gave one great leap and then stood still. On the floor before her lay the body of the man she loved.

"Joe!" she screamed. "What are you doing here? Joe, Joe, speak to me!"

But there was no answer. His eyes were closed, and the pallor of death seemed to be upon his face.

With strength beyond what she had ever known herself to possess, Gloria seized the motionless form and dragged and rolled the man into Little Ella's room. Before she closed and bolted the door, then she bent over him and begged him to speak to her, to open his eyes and know that she was with him.

"Joe, don't you know me?" she pleaded. Then to Little Ella, "He's dead, he's dead. See, he doesn't move."

"Yes, he does," answered the other
